

Dr. Bryan Recker

Periodontist - Rochester, Minn.

"It's made a big difference in my practice, both clinically and in the relationships I am developing with the members of the two clubs I host. I'm seeing a higher level of patient care being done in my town, with much better collaboration between GPs, specialists and lab technicians. I feel a higher level of job satisfaction overall, because not only I am practicing a higher level of dentistry myself, I am also doing it with these important partners in my professional community.

I find that people in the group start to recognize that we are working well together and we are sharing a common treatment philosophy, which is huge, and that all translates in to better referrals. There are some GPs who previously were working with maybe three or four surgeons on implants and now they refer almost exclusively to me. And there were dentists in our groups who had never referred to me who are now sending patients my way. There is a confidence and sense of trust there now.

I didn't really intend to do two study clubs but just about everyone we invited to the information session wanted to sign up so I split things up to keep the groups small and collaborative. Now I have even more dentists approaching me about joining, and the thing is, because Spear makes it so easy by providing great material and support, I am even thinking of starting a third one. After all, as a CE junkie, I get so much out of this, not just from the material but from what I learn from everybody else. It's the greatest CE value out there."
